

Goddess of Wealth visits only the homes that are well kept

There is an old saying in India that “Goddess of Wealth visits only the homes that are well kept”. What may be the reason to this saying?

To maintain a home neat, clean and tidy involves lot of work and needs immediate attention to correct problems that happen at home. The home is continuous in use and someone or the other does something all the time that alters the tidiness of the house. So in order to restore the tidiness the members of the family should work meticulously to keep the house clean. This involves good observation, planning, and corrective action in a reasonable amount of time and so forth which involves lot of self discipline.

A person who develops this kind of self discipline will also do the same to his / her work, to manage his / her finance. So the family will earn more money over a period of time.

On the contrary, a home that is not well kept indicates the poor self discipline, careless, carefree, poor observation and lack of corrective action on a regular and timely manner. Naturally that person who maintains such a home will have the same attitude towards managing money and may manage money in bursts of time. May let debt grow thinking of correcting it later or when more money comes in. This may lead to poor earning and saving.

So the above analysis may help understand the old saying, “Goddess of Wealth visits only the homes that are well kept”.
